PERFORMANCE WORK STATEMENT

Establish Digital Research Collection and Provide Oral History Support

1. General Description

The Office of History (CEHO) maintains a rich collection of documents, photographs, and oral history interviews that chronicle the history of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. In the past the majority of the new material accessioned into the office's Research Collection consisted of textual records—primarily documents, transcripts, photographs, and maps—that needed to be integrated into the office's existing collection.

Over the last decade the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers had undergone a pronounced shift. Now majority of its records are created and transmitted electronically. Moreover, in a bid to make its historical content available to a wider audience, the office is digitizing significant portions of its holdings.

Consequently, CEHO requires the services of a support contractor to help the office establish a Digital Research Collection (DRC) to organize and permanently store a wide variety of digital content. In addition, CEHO requires the services of a contractor to process, arrange, and accessions new interviews into its oral history collection. This statement of work includes several groups of interviews including: 40 interviews resulting from operations in Afghanistan (hereafter the OEF interviews), 20 interviews conducted for the History of Emergency Operations, 15 interviews chronicling the Department of Defense' Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) initiative, 10 Career and Subject interviews (hereafter the Career interviews), and 6 interviews stemming from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' support to Operation United Assistance (OUA) in Liberia.

2. Performance Work Statement

Establishing the DRC will require a systemic development, appraisal, and accession effort for both "legacy data" (historic material digitized and accessioned into the DRC) and born digital content. The steps for designing, establishing, populating, and maintaining the DRC are outlined below.

Working closely with the CEHO staff, the contractor will help establish the hierarchy and organization of the digital collection. Once the hierarchy and organization of the DRC are established, the contractor will develop a Windows File Explorer file architecture that mirrors the accepted hierarchy.

The contractor will then assist CEHO identify the legacy data, currently contained in CEHO's Research Collection, or born digital content that currently resides on the office's shared drive, that needs to be transitioned into the DRC. Once that step is complete the contractor will work with the CEHO staff to develop a process plan and schedule to transfer digital content into the DRC. A key element of the process plan is developing a list of the digital formats (Word documents, PowerPoint, TIF, jpeg etc, files) that may be accessioned into the DRC as well as a listing of digital file requirements for all file types per the National Archives and Records Administration. Another key element of the process plan is establishing and implementing DRC security standards including who has access to the collection and what CEHO staff members are authorized to modify the digital research collections architecture of contents.

After the legacy and born digital content in CEHO's holdings are identified the contractor will be responsible for moving or copying that content into the DRC. After the digital material has been accessioned into the DRC the contractor will create a summary content list that describes the contents of the DRC. The content list should provide a brief statement addressing the provenance of the material in the DRC as well as the highlights and limitations of the collection. The contractor will also work with CEHO staff to create individual Collection Statements that will go into each top-level folder in the DRC. The Collection Statements will define the different types of collections and materials in the DRC, where the materials came from, and what types of additional information is appropriate to add to those collections in the future.

At the conclusion of the data migration effort the contractor work with the CEHO staff to define what types of digital material the office wants to collect in the future and prepare a process plan for accessioning that material into the collection on a regular basis. For work on the Oral History Collection specifically, the contractor's first task will be to conduct thorough inventories of the OEF, History of Emergency Operations, BRAC, Career, and OUA interviews and update the finding aids as necessary. Where necessary, the contractor will also prepare an Excel spreadsheet for each collection containing: the name of the interviewee, date of the interview, name of interviewer, length of the recorded interview, page length of transcript, and if a release agreement is available.

Also, many of the transcripts are in various stages of the editing process. The contractor will review the existing digital transcripts, determine which version is the most complete, and enter that document into the oral history collection. If the interview has not been edited, the contractor will edit it.

The fully edited digital transcripts will be converted into searchable PDFs and accessioned into CEHO's oral history collection.

The contractor will also produce, using Government furnished equipment and supplies, paper copies of all of the edited digital transcripts accessioned into the collection. The transcripts, printed on acid free archival paper, will be foldered and boxed, using archival supplies provided by the government, and in accordance with the best archival practices. The contractor will also update the finding aids for the interview collections to show the physical location of the transcripts.

During the completion of this contract the contractor will work closely with the Contracting Officer's Representatives (COR). The COR for the DRC portion of the contract is Mr. James Garber and the COR for the Oral History work is Dr. Bianka Adams. The contractor will prepare samples of the updated CEHO finding aid, Excel spreadsheet of the oral history collection, and scanned and converted oral history transcripts for review and approval before beginning on the final products outlined below

(B) The taxpayer is delinquent in making payment. A taxpayer is delinquent if the taxpayer has failed to pay the tax liability when full payment was due and required. A taxpayer is not delinquent in cases where enforced collection action is precluded.

(ii) Examples.

(A) The taxpayer has received a statutory notice of deficiency, under I.R.C. Sec. 6212, which entitles the taxpayer to seek Tax Court review of a proposed tax deficiency. This is not a delinquent tax because it is not a final tax liability. Should the taxpayer seek Tax Court review, this will not be a final tax liability until the taxpayer has exercised all judicial appeal rights.

(B) The IRS has filed a notice of Federal tax lien with respect to an assessed tax liability, and the taxpayer has been issued a notice under I.R.C. Sec. 6320 entitling the taxpayer to request a hearing with the IRS Office of Appeals contesting the lien filing, and to further appeal to the Tax Court if the IRS determines to sustain the lien filing. In the course of the hearing, the taxpayer is entitled to contest the underlying tax liability because the taxpayer has had no prior opportunity to contest the liability. This is not a delinquent tax because it is not a final tax liability. Should the taxpayer seek tax court review, this will not be a final tax liability until the taxpayer has exercised all judicial appeal rights.

(C) The taxpayer has entered into an installment agreement pursuant to I.R.C. Sec. 6159. The taxpayer is making timely payments and is in full compliance with the agreement terms. The taxpayer is not delinquent because the taxpayer is not currently required to make full payment.

(D) The taxpayer has filed for bankruptcy protection. The taxpayer is not delinquent because enforced collection action is stayed under 11 U.S.C. 362 (the Bankruptcy Code).
